Inscription on the tomb-stone of MARGARET SCOTT, who died at Dalkeith, in Scotland, Feb. 1738, Æt. 125.

Stop Passenger, until my life you read:
The living may get knowledge by the dead.
Full seven years I liv'd a virgin's life;
Seven times seven years I was a virtuous wife:
Seven times seven years I liv'd a widow chaste;
Now weary'd of this mortal life, I rest.
Between my cradle and my grave have been
Eight-and-forty Kings of Scotland, and a Queen.
Four times five years the commonwealth I saw;
Ten times the subjects rose against the law.
Three times I see old Prelacy pull'd down;
And twice the Cloak was humbled by the Gown.
An end of Stuart's Race I saw: Nay, more!
My native country sold for English ore.
Such alterations in my life have been,
I've seen and known all perfection seen.

On the LAW.

UNHAPPY Chremes, neighbor to a Peer,
Kept half his ſheep, and fatted half his deer;
Each day his gates thrown down, his fences broke,
And injur'd ſtill the more, the more he ſpoke;
At laſt reſolv'd his potent foe to awe,
And guard his right, by ſtatute and by law;
A ſuit in Chancery the wretch begun,
Nine happy terms through bill and anſwer run,
Obtain'd his cauſe, had coſts, and was undone.

A ſatyrical REPLY from an Innholder, to the Bench of Juſtices.

THE Bench of Juſtice having denied licences to every Publican who had John Wilkes, Eſq; for his ſign. A ſpirited perſon, who was a ſufferer on this account, ſaid in his own indication on the above occaſion, that he was no friend either to John Wilkes or his cauſe, and therefore had hung him up in effigy, to ſhew his real principles; but if he had undeſignedly given them any offence, he was ready to pull down John Wilkes, and hang up the whole Bench in his ſtead.

TRADE being the real support and strength of a nation; I doubt not the following rules will be acceptable to my Countrymen.

RULES proper to be observed in TRADE.

Strive to maintain a fair character in the world: That will be the best means for advancing your credit, gaining you the most flourishing trade, and enlarging your fortune. Condescend to no mean actions but add a lustre to trade, by keeping up to the dignity of your nature.

To conclude.

In things of moment, on thyself depend,
Nor trust too far thy servant or thy friend:
With private views, thy friend may promise fair,
And servants very seldom prove sincere.

What can be done with care perform to day,
Dangers unthought-of will attend delay;
Your distant prospects all precarious are,
And fortune is as fickle as she's fair.
Nor trivial loss, nor trivial gain despise;
Mole-hills, if often heap'd, to mountains rise:
Weigh every small expence, and nothing waste,
Farthings long sav'd amount to pounds at last.

IN former ages view a Grecian Bard,
Singing in matchless strains of deeds unheard;
While silent envy wonders at the plan,
His epic beams to grace the acts of man:
The world's great heroes there their arts display,
Blaze forth in arms, and glitter on the day:

X Mo. SEPTEMBER, hath 30 Days. 1779.

As when an Ajax thunders o'er the main,
And when Achilles' wrath like lightning's flame;
Neſtor experienc'd counſel to impart,
Ulyſſes winding in the maze of art.
Do we ſeek thoſe whom prudence has adorn'd,
Do we ſeek thoſe whom wiſdom has enthron'd;
Or thoſe who bend to nature's kind deſires,
Whom each juſt paſſion of the heart inſpires;
Or thoſe whoſe ſtrength the Hydra's power diſdain'd,
And land and ſea with blood of thouſands ſtain'd:

In vain renown they all resplendent seam,
In Homer's subject, and in Virgil's theme.
But how can deeds now rusting in the page,
Thus gain the praise and wonder of our age?
Let nobler subjects grace our modern lays,
And modern subjects shine in nobler praise.
Behold this land, too late the seat of beasts;
The dismal cottage; and infernal feasts—

A trackleſs way where Pagans us'd to roam, 25
Where howling noiſes echo'd thro' the gloom:
Where truth and juſtice ſhun'd the open day,
To jealous ſtrength and envious zeal a prey.
A great decree that look'd thro' nature's maze,
Wrought out the plan, and time brought forth the praiſe: 30
A Goddeſs ſent from yonder realms of light,
Parent of Freedom, conſcience' great delight,
Prepar'd a way for nations yet unheard,
In manners poliſh'd, and in arts rever'd.

Great Albion's sons, who scorn'd to fear their laws,
Or worship Tyrants with divine applause,
Witness'd, as martyrs, with their dying blood,
Their claim was Freedom, and their cause of God.
Still usurpation rag'd without restraint,
And pitying justice made its vain complaint;
'Till some resolv'd with zeal and virtuous care,
To leave the eastern for the western sphere.

miraculous discovery of a MURDER, which had been committed seven years, by the gushing of blood from a bone which had laid many years in the water.

SOME years since, as two Fishermen were fishing in the north of Scotland, a bone came up several times on the hook of one of them, and being wearied with throwing it into the sea, could fish no longer, it still fastening on his hook, until, being persuaded by his comrade, he laid it by him in the boat. His comrade at night acquainted their master with the strange event, and enquired what could be the reason of it. The gentleman after consideration, desired him to bring the bone which lay in the boat, and call his neighbor, as he came along, to come with him. No sooner was the bone brought but all present did conclude it to be the leg bone of a man, and desired him that brought it, to hold it out in his hand, which obeyed their desire, without any effect. The gentleman then desired the other, on whose hook the bone came up so oft, to take it in his hand; who no sooner laid hold on it, but three drops of blood fell from the old, withered, rotten, dry bone, to the amazement of all beholders. After inquiry and examination the man confessed his guilt, in these words: "Alas, about seven years ago, my neighbor and I were fishing in the same place where the bone fastened on my hook, and falling by the ears for some words, I being stronger than he, threw him out of the boat into the sea, where he was drowned: And this is the just providence of GOD, who discovereth the murder and the shedding of innocent blood, which will not pass unpunished." The poor man whom he had murdered, was a very honest man, and well beloved, which made the gentleman, his master, and all his acquaintance, hasten the murderer to execution, and an untimely death.

A strange discovery of a MURDER, by the execution of a person on a supposed crime, of which he was innocent.

A Person being brought to the place of execution, when he was ready to lay down his head to the block, exclaimed against himself thus: "Good people, believe me, I am innocent of the crime now laid to my charge; but my conscience telleth me, that GOD's justice hath brought me hither; for, the whom I murdered and threw in a ditch where no man saw."

A MURDER found out and revenged the same day six years from the time it had been committed.

TWO gentlemen in Scotland falling out betwixt themselves in the fields, the one slew the other; the feud continued betwixt the families, it was observed, that the same day six years, the murdered's grandchild slew the grandchild of the murderer.

an extraordinary instance of GENEROSITY shewn by Monsieur CHATILLON, a French Admiral.

AS Admiral Chatillon was saying Mass on a Holiday in the Dominican Friar's chapel in France, a poor fellow begg'd his charity just as he was most intent on his devotions. He felt in his pocket and gave him several pieces of gold, without counting them, or minding what they were. The considerable alms so dazzled the beggar's eyes, that he was amaz'd at it. As Monsieur Chatillon was going out of the church-door, where the poor man waited for him; Sir, said he, shewing him what he had given him, I cannot tell whether you intended to give me so large a sum; if not, I am very ready to return it. The Admiral wondering at the honesty of the man, said, "I did not indeed, honest man: But as you have the generosity to offer to return it, I will have the generosity to desire you to keep it, and there are five pieces more for you."
